Amelia Earhart was one of the most famous aviators in the world. She was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean, and she also set records for altitude and speed. In 1937, she and her navigator, Fred Noonan, disappeared over the Pacific Ocean while attempting to fly around the world. Their disappearance remains one of the greatest mysteries in aviation history.

There have been many theories about what happened to Earhart and Noonan. Some believe that they crashed into the ocean, while others believe that they were captured by the Japanese. Still others believe that they faked their own deaths and lived out their lives in secret.

In this book, author Susan Butler reveals the truth behind Earhart's disappearance, based on new evidence and interviews with key figures. Butler argues that Earhart and Noonan did not crash into the ocean, but instead landed on a remote island in the Pacific. They were then captured by the Japanese, who held them prisoner for several years. Eventually, Earhart and Noonan were able to escape and make their way back to the United States. However, they were met with hostility and disbelief, and they were forced to live in hiding for the rest of their lives.

Butler's book is a fascinating and well-researched account of Earhart's disappearance. It is a must-read for anyone who is interested in aviation history or in the mystery of Amelia Earhart.
