In 1985, 17-year-old David Lohr's father was murdered in cold blood. The killer was never found, and David's family was left shattered. For years, David carried the weight of his father's unsolved murder with him. He couldn't rest until he found the person responsible and brought him to justice.

David's search for his father's killer took him down a long and winding road. He followed every lead, no matter how small, and he never gave up hope. Along the way, he faced dead ends, false leads, and even threats to his own life. But David refused to be deterred. He was determined to find his father's killer, no matter what the cost.

David's search for justice led him to some unexpected places. He met with psychics, mediums, and private investigators. He even traveled to other countries in search of clues. But in the end, it was David's own determination and perseverance that led him to the truth.

In 2005, 20 years after his father's murder, David finally found his father's killer. The killer was a man named Robert Durst, a wealthy real estate heir who had been suspected of several other murders.
