In ancient Greek and Roman mythology, stories such as those of Demeter and Persephone, Rhea and Zeus, and Hera and Herakles depict the powerful bond between mothers and their children, highlighting their unwavering love and fierce protection.

In the Middle Ages, medieval literature often portrayed the Virgin Mary as the epitome of motherhood, symbolizing the strength, compassion, and grace of mothers. Works such as Dante's Divine Comedy and Chaucer's Canterbury Tales delve into the profound love and sacrifice of mothers in the face of adversity.

Mother love transcends geographical boundaries, finding expression in diverse cultures around the world. In Asian literature, for instance, the relationship between mother and son is often depicted with great reverence and depth. Writers such as Haruki Murakami and Jung Chang explore the complex dynamics of this bond, examining the sacrifices mothers make and the profound impact they have on their sons' lives.

In African literature, storytelling traditions often center on the strength and resilience of mothers. Works such as Chinua Achebe's Things Fall Apart

Literature also provides a window into the psychological complexities of mother love. In modern works, authors explore the challenges, joys, and transformative experiences of motherhood.
