I never thought I would find myself in a hot tub with a group of strangers. But there I was, sitting in a swirling whirlpool of hot water, surrounded by people I had never met before.

It was all part of a writing workshop I was attending. The workshop was being held at a resort in the mountains, and on the first night, we were all invited to gather in the hot tub to get to know each other.

I was hesitant at first. I'm not a big fan of hot tubs, and I'm not very good at small talk. But I figured it would be a good opportunity to meet some new people, so I decided to give it a try.

I'm so glad I did.

The people in the hot tub were all so different, but we all had one thing in common: we were all there to write.

We talked about our writing, our dreams, and our fears. We laughed, we cried, and we shared our stories.

I learned a lot about myself that night. I learned that I'm more outgoing than I thought I was. I learned that I'm capable of connecting with people on a deep level, even if I don't know them well.

And I learned that life is full of surprises.

The next day, I started writing a memoir about my experience in the hot tub. I wrote about the people I met, the conversations we had, and the lessons I learned.

I called the memoir View From The Hot Tub.

View From The Hot Tub is a funny, heartwarming, and inspiring story about the power of human connection. It's a story that will make you laugh, cry, and see the world in a new light.

I hope you'll give View From The Hot Tub a read. I think you'll find it to be a truly special book.
